sleek blueberry, blackberry, raspberry, and cherry flavors relatively unburdened by unnecessary oak. I actually drank this gem with broiled salmon, and it just nailed the pairing. If you've ever traveled the Pacific NW of the United States, you know that there is an uncanny compatibility between the food and the wine. This is a great example of the principle, "If it grows together, it goes together." It's really well executed, and if you're looking for a refreshing Oregon Pinot Noir, this one fits the bill.
