Winter months means holidays. Holidays mean family time. Family time means drinks are a necessity. (But props to you if you can handle your uncle's political rants without any liquid courage.)

Aaandddd, news flash, there's thankfully more to winter drinks than just eggnog. You don't need to sip on that creamy concoction when there are a variety of cocktails far more appropriate for winter vibes. Think: hot teas, aromatic spices, and a healthy dose of alcohol, all of which are equally perfect for curling up next to the fireplace or avoiding the "so, are you seeing anyone?" question that will inevitably come out of your grandma's mouth. "Still no grandma..." *sips on spiced hot toddy for emotional relief*

So if you're looking to avoid the dreaded family convos or just looking to avoid going outside for a drink (it's cold, people), I'm here to help. Here, 23 of the coziest, yummiest updates to your favorite cold-weather classics that you can make at home. Infuse your own vodka, level up with mulled rosé, or, hell, put a marshmallow on top—whatever you choose, you certainly won't be stuck with the basic eggnog this year.

4. Hablamos Mañana

Combine 1 oz. Abasolo whisky, ½ oz. Montelobos Espadin mezcal, ½ oz. Pasote Añejo Tequila, ¼ oz. agave syrup, 2 dashes Bitter Queens tobacco bitters, and 2 dashes Bitercube Corazón bitters in a mixing glass. Add ice. Stir. Strain over ice, a large cube is preferred but not necessary. Express lemon peel over the top and drop in the glass.
